SCHOOL OF ARTS AND COMMUNICATION

Art

The Art Area of the School of Arts and Communication offers Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA), Bachelor of Arts (BA), and Bachelor of Science (BS) degrees through extensive course work in fine arts, graphic design, photography, and art history.

The curriculum provides an awareness and understanding of the historical and contemporary significance of art as a unique feature of society. Major programs offer the opportunity for professional artistic development while incorporating subjects that lead to a liberal education. These programs prepare the student for a range of professional opportunities or later graduate study in photography, fine art, and art history, as well as many related fields. As a cultural enrichment for our students, the Art Area sponsors exhibitions, lectures, workshops, and other events related to the visual arts.

Candidates for the BFA degree may select an option in fine arts or photography. Candidates for the BS degree may select the fine arts or photography option. Candidates for the BA degree may select an option in fine arts, art history, or photography. The BFA is a pre-professional degree. The College of Liberal Arts requirements for the BFA differ from other degree programs. (See BFA/Applied Visual Arts.) Admission into either the Fine Arts or Photography option is selective and competitive. See program requirements for specific details.

The Art History minor combines an introduction to art history with an opportunity to explore advanced topics. The Visual Arts minor is a studio concentration in either fine arts or photography. The Art Area also participates in the New Media Communications minors and Digital Communication Arts major, as well as the Master of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies (MAIS).

Monthly Art Exhibitions

The Art Area of the School of Arts and Communication, based in Fairbanks Hall, features monthly exhibitions by nationally and internationally recognized artists in the Fairbanks Gallery. The school is also the sponsor of the Visiting Artists and Scholars Lecture Series, which has brought in renowned artists including Philip Pearlstein, Ann Hamilton, Marina Abromovic, Bill Viola, and Do Ho Suh. In 1995, the school created the Jumpstart (http://catalog.oregonstate.edu/ChapterDetail.aspx?key=61) Precollege Visual and Performing Arts Workshop held each summer for talented high school students in art, music, and theater.

Music

The Music Area of the School of Arts and Communication offers programs leading to the Bachelor of Arts (BA) or Bachelor of Science (BS) degree, a variety of baccalaureate core courses for students with little or no background in music, and opportunities for qualified students to perform in bands, choirs, and the symphony orchestra. Students wishing a greater curricular choice may wish to combine music study with courses in another school or department in the College of Liberal Arts for a liberal studies major. The Music Area also offers minors in Music and Popular Music Studies.

The Music Area also teaches graduate courses in music education, literature and history, conducting, performance and special projects. Graduate students may pursue the Master of Arts in Teaching: Music Education (MAT) degree or the Master of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies (MAIS) degree in a broad range of fields. OSU's graduate programs in music have been approved by Oregon's Teacher Standards and Practices Commission and the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education. Programs are available for individuals seeking both the initial and/or continuing license in music at all levels of authorization.

Performance instruction at the intermediate and advanced levels is available with instructor consent. Students should contact the school office for application procedures and fee schedules.

The Music Area proudly presents upwards of 200 musical events of all types throughout the academic year and summer. Choral, instrumental, orchestral ensembles of all sizes and types provide students from across campus the chance to participate in and/or simply enjoy listening to music. Many ensembles and events include the chance to work with and learn from professional musicians and nationally and internationally-recognized music educators.

Scholarships are available for music majors and for outstanding performers. Auditions and interviews take place in February and March each year. Selection is based on musical and academic achievement.

The Sound Design Lab in Community Hall includes state-of-the-art digital recording and editing hardware and software and is open to all OSU students. Work-study students are available to help students learn how to use the facilities.

Career possibilities in music include teaching in the schools, private instruction, performing in orchestras or ensembles, music librarianship, arts management, music business, and recording engineering.

New Media Communications

The New Media Communications (NMC) Area of the School of Arts and Communication offers Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA), Bachelor of Arts (BA), and Bachelor of Science (BS) degrees in Digital Communication Arts. There is also a minor in New Media Communications. Course work explores the storytelling capacity of contemporary media and technologies. When pursuing an NMC degree students acquire the skills they need to use today's media effectively in sharing knowledge, imagination, and information. Students also learn to anticipate how future changes in the media are likely to influence their lives. In NMC courses, students explore how to make abstract concepts or hidden processes visible, how to anticipate people's reactions to innovation, how to write professionally, how to recognize the influence of media, how to produce creative content in a variety of media formats, and much more.

A New Media Communications major prepares students for a lifetime of change and involvement in the digital world.

NMC courses are taught in multiple venues on campus including the Motion-Capture and Gaming labs, both currently located on the fourth floor of Strand Ag Hall.

Each year numerous New Media students participate in internships with on-campus organizations and off campus with local and regional companies. Selected students participate in the National Association of Broadcasters annual convention and other regional and national organizations and events.

Speech Communication

The Communication Area of the School of Arts and Communication offers a major program leading to a Bachelor of Arts (BA) or Bachelor of Science (BS) degree. The degree examines both theoretical and practical aspects of human communication as a liberal art, as a social science, as background for further study, or as pre-professional experience. All students initially pursuing a Speech Communication major with an option in Communication take basic courses in public speaking, argumentation, and interpersonal communication. Further studies focus on areas such as rhetorical and communication theory, methods of criticism and research, and history. Students pursuing an option in Communication enhance the skills inherent in all human interactions, preparing themselves for a range of potential vocational pursuits, avocations, and graduate study. The area also offers a Communication minor.

The Communication Area is located in cottage-esque Shepard Hall on Campus Way. Communication Area students are active in Lambda Pi Eta, the National Communication Association’s honor society for four-year colleges and universities. Students from across the university also compete on the nationally-recognized OSU Forensics Team in individual events and debate. Faculty and graduate students participate regularly in national and regional conferences as well as area-sponsored colloquia on campus.

The Communication Area also takes part in the Master of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies (MAIS), with many master’s students pursuing two areas of concentration within the area’s graduate curriculum.

Theatre Arts
The Theatre Arts Area offers a Bachelor of Arts (BA) or Bachelor of Science (BS) degree option in theatre within the Speech Communication major. The Theatre Arts option emphasizes a liberal arts approach to theatre history, practice, and production. All students pursuing the degree complete a core of classes designed to introduce them to fundamental elements of the art. The large remaining portion of the option is split between courses in history/theory/literature and those focusing on design/technical/performance matters. Students select specific classes within each disciplinary area to match their interests (performance, design, literature, etc.) while meeting key degree requirements. The result is a theatre education grounded in a liberal arts perspective and emphasizing a basic knowledge of all theatre elements. The area offers a similarly structured minor in Theatre Arts.

The Theatre Arts Area facilities are located in Withycombe Hall. The Main Stage Theatre seats approximately 350 in a modified-proscenium arrangement while the flexible Laboratory Theatre seats around 100. Both spaces function as classrooms as well as performance venues.

The University Theatre (UT) is the producing arm of the Theatre Arts Area. Students from across campus collaborate with UT faculty, staff, and guest artists to create theatre productions throughout the academic year and summer. Students from all colleges and departments across campus are encouraged and welcome to participate.

The Theatre Arts Area also participates in the Master of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies (MAIS) degree program.
