

WRITING MINOR

Also available via Ecampus.

The Writing minor benefits students who wish to learn about, practice and hone their writing skills, primarily to prepare them for their careers and to increase their qualifications for professional positions in a world where communication skills are ever more needed and revered by employers. Some students with aspirations for graduate, law or medical school studies pursue the Writing minor to better enable themselves to write more proficiently at higher academic levels, where work is more rigorous and written output is expected to be of a very high level. Others engage in the Writing minor for the pure joy of expressing themselves, working with ideas and words, and many publish works in student publications on campus and in external publications. Writing minors may also participate in on-campus and off-campus internships for credit.

Students must receive a grade of C– or better in any course applied toward the minor. Such courses cannot be taken with S/U grading.

The Writing minor requires a minimum of 27 credits, as follows: a minimum of 11 credits from 100- to 300-level writing courses, plus a minimum of 12 credits from 400-level upper-division writing courses, plus one elective upper-division (300/400) 4-credit course in writing or literature.
